

Caitlin ni Houlihan

A character in Yeats play of the same name that was in affect a model of the spiritual 'old woman of Ireland'. She was represented as a sad but proud woman. The play helped to inspire national consciousness and the character was called upon by many thereafter including Jim Larkin and Pádraig Pearse.